The intervention of Generals Gouse, Roset and De Bolsdeffre and Major Lauth, who in rapid succession mounts eit the stage or rose in their seats and interposed remarks, was very exciting and carried the spectators along on a wave of breathlessness. One after the other, there officers, who were to Lay in full uniform, would jump and cry "I demand to be heard," and without further waiting, ascend the stars of the platform and begin a statement of the platform and begin a statement in support of a brother officer. Sometimes Gur officers were on the stage at the same time. It was a marvelon display of military clambinness. At one time a perfect babel of volce, reigned for several minutes, until Colonel Jouanst intervened and restored order.

M. Labori's cross-examination was successful so far as it went but Colonel Jouanst's health earthful to was the sum of the course for the defense then and during questions. The result was a perfect babel until the president of the course could stand it no longer, and when the government commissary, Macoursel for the defense then and during the plating questions. counset for the defense then and during the cross-examination of the witness M. de Grandmaison evoked the severest criticism and the part of the public present and bodes lif for Dreyfus. Not only Colonel Jouanst, but the other judges displayed considerable impatience during Labori's scathing cross-examination shifting resitessly in their scats and drumming on the tables with the tips of their fingers.

General Mercer faced Labori's fire with calm demeanor, standing on the platform, his hands behind his back and his fare only half turned toward his questioner. Once or twice a savage look in the even an elevation in the tone and a swaying to and fro of the body revealed the inner fires of resent-confession that Colonel Sandherr and Lieutenant Colonel Henry played with the minister of war, and even General Roget faced the court with an air of a blushing, effrontery. His handsome, but unsympethetic features are suppressed the bitterest cours as he spun round on his heef and, with arms crossed, faced Labori or the audience or the judges. He is extremely vain and is always striking attitudes for the benefit of newspaper artists, quite a number of whom regularly attend the pessions. His impertinent behavior was strikingly illustrated roday when he interrupted M. Labori's examination of General Chamoin, which had resulted in Labori's woring heavily against Mercier, with the exclamation, "This examination is a waste of time" president of the court, ordered that the evidence given by M. Penot, a friend of the late Colonel Sandherr, cherf of the intelligence department, he read by the clerk of the court. It was to the effect that Colonel Sandherr said the Dreyfus for the defense disposed of the allegation by reading the actual note written on the subject by Colonel Sandherr, thereby proving that the colonel's remarks had been distorted, the Dreyfus brothers having only said:

"We are convinced of the innocence of our brother, and will spend our entire fortune to discover the truth."

The testimony of the first witness of the day, M. Linoile, a former officer of the government, was also in favor of Dreyfus, as it was in direct contradiction of what M. Debuelul deposed yesterday regarding the alleged intimacy of Dreyfus with the German attache at the house of M. Podson, a mutual friend.

The noise created by the steam alrena, the callioner, the ringing of bells and cannon drowned all other noises incident to the occasion.

The passage of the welcoming fleet down the bay toward the occan seemed for the moment to appease the wardness on shore, but suddenly eyes not keen than others sighted the Sherman and an escort of tugs nearing the harbor, and then all interest in the gally docurated yachts was for the time lost. Every face was turned toward the occan. Nearer and nearer the big waite steamer came, and closer and closer the two fleets came toward each other.

As the Sherman approached the Gate the land batteries beliched forth in a mitional salute and the bay steamers took up the signal with their sirens. Pandemonium reigned. Nearer and nearer the welcome vessel came, and at last pushed her prove into the 5, acc left for her, and such a scene occurred as has never been seen on this coast before. Slowly the fleet moved along with the transport. It seemed as if every floating thing on the bay had been pressed into service. The fleet gathered strength in numbers as it arrived well inside the bay. It was a grand sight and one hever to be forgotten. The gallant Californians on the transport seemed wild with delight over the reception given them. They cheered and cheered, waved flags and handkerchiefs and caps, and even their coats, in their excitement. As the fleet swept past the seawall the din became more and more deafening and the waving of flags more frantic. The people were mad, it seemed, but never before have Californians had the opportunity to welcome their own kin from the wars.

Boosts Pennsylvania's Industries.

"Within the last year the exports of iron and steel have increased 31 percent and there is every reason to believe that American manufactures of these products have gained a lasting foothold abroad. In 1836 the value of exports of iron and steel and manufactures thereof was $41,160.87, whereas during the fiscal year ending in June of 1836 the value of these products was $32,715.51, or more than double that of three years ago. Coincident with this remarkable increase in exports is the no less decrease in the imports of the same producta. Three years ago the value of such imports was $25,238,103, while during the year which has just closed they are valued at $12,098,239, or less than half that of 1856. These figures tell the story of the plenomenal change. "During this recent period of Republican supremacy the great agricultural classes have been blessed with abundant trops. These have been marketed at prices which not only enabled the farmer to live comfortably, but to recover from the disasters of previous years. But the most significant instance is found in the state of Nobraska, where from 1852 to 1855 there was no year in which the mortgages filed did not exceed mortgages released, while during 1837 and 1898 the mortgages released, while during 1837 and 1898 the mortgages released exceeded the mortgages filed from 25 to 32 per cent. So might industry after industry be reviewed and we would find that it would all be a record of growth and prosperity, the faifiliment of the promise made by the Republican party of advancing wages and widening fields of employment to husy and happy millions, who only so recently were so despondent and de-

The declaration made in 1896 by the people of the United States in behalf of an unquestionable money standard gave such assurance of stable conditions that the present season of high activity could be suid to date from that even ful day. this they have been as successful as they could have hoped. Unless affairs take some unforeseen turn the Fliphnoss will resume the war this fall with fresh spirit and a replenished stock of arms and ammunition. One shipload of arms, it is learned on good authority, has reached them within the past week. Of money the lenders of the insurrection have no lack. They control the resources of a large and exceedingly rich country, and even though no crops were harvened for several years, they could still obtain enough cash and supplies by impressing to their use the treasures of the church, the storehouses of farmers and manufacturers and the founds of orivate individuals a system of levy which they have long enforced with considerable success.
